Description of Site or Structure:

This rectangular two-story structure has shiplap siding and a roofline of two inter-connecting gables that meet at right angles. The main floor windows are two sash single pane variety. The second floor has a palladian window. The smaller side windows are one sash type with three panes and semicircular transom separated from the main semi-circular window by pilasters. The main door is oriented south onto Main Street. It is an aluminum frame door with a sheet of commercial plate glass extending the length of it. The porch is four by five feet approximately, with an irregular southern boundary. It is covered by a roof supported by three columns with decorative brackets.
